

Post Reply

Page 19 of 19 << First < 9 14 15 16 17 18 19

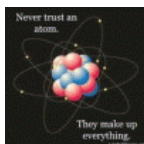

☒ View First Unread

SHARE f t e ... Thread Tools

5 Aug 2013 , 14:21 PM

#181

joanneatom
Free Mind

Join Date: 6 Dec 2012

Location: UK

Posts: 1,089

Threads: 10

Thanked 2,361
Times in 840 Posts

Re: The Alleged Medical Witnesses

Quote:

Originally Posted by joanneatom

A bit later on and from another angle (Sdoia just out of shot). More fire engines arriving and are blocking off the road.

Source for the quoted picture in the above post: <http://lakehealthyliving.com/2013/06/b-strong/>

..Never trust an atom...they make up everything....

Quote

The Following User Says Thank You to joanneatom For This Useful Post:

clive

19 Aug 2013 ,

#182

13:33 PM

felixfelix

Writer

Join Date: 21
Apr 2013

Posts: 493

Threads: 2

Thanked 1,117
Times in 426
Posts

Re: The Alleged Medical Witnesses

Quote:

Originally Posted by joanneatom

2. Quite a few names in the second paragraph. All members of the podiatry team, and a couple of names we have yet to investigate.

Dr Kirk Neustrom - I was independently researching this guy, and noticed this post by joanneatom.

I transcribed his "official narrative" interview:

<http://www.firstcoastnews.com/video/...out-experience>

"We were in the medical tent, just treating patients, we didn't have very many patients, it was a beautiful day, so we didn't have too many people in the medical tent, so we decided to go out and stand at the finish line and watch runners come across and right as we were ready to go out we heard a loud boom, and we didn't think too much of it at the time, we kind of wondered what it was, the ground shook, and so we walked outside and looked down the street and saw a plume of smoke coming up and we were kinda thinking 'OK wonder what this is' and about 15 to 20 seconds later another very large boom and a plume of smoke went up and at that point I realised it was a bomb and so I immediately headed towards where the bombs went off because obviously when you have bombs, you have casualties and victims and people needing medical assistance, and as part of the medical team for the Boston Marathon that is your responsibility, so I was on the scene probably 30 seconds to 45 seconds after the bombs discharged and found a scene with mass casualties probably very similar to what you would see in Iraq or Iran with a car bomb going off.

There were bodies strewn all over the sidewalk. When I first got there, the first thing I saw was somebody bringing a man without legs to the ambulance. There was lots of blood, lots of body parts exposed, bones sticking out and it was pretty very gruesome and basically what I did as I functioned in triage, looking for the victims, identifying their wounds and prioritising them as to who needed to be transported and then assisting anyone else, aiding the victims, which mostly involved putting compression on wounds. I helped put a belt on somebody's leg as a tourniquet. Lots of belts were being applied for tourniquets to stop the bleeding so the limbs could be salvaged. Comfort measures, I comforted several, several women and a young child who was rather hysterical at the time and I calmed him and assured him everything would be OK. And we all just kept working until everyone was removed from the scene and was either taken directly by ambulance to the hospital or moved into the medical tent where they could be stabilised and then transported to the hospital.

There's really been no experience similar to this. I was a podiatrist in the Navy for three years which I did get mass casualty training, which you always go back to your training and that is you think you would forget it but it is in the back of your mind and it kicks in and that is basically what you identify when you have a mass casualty site. You prioritise and follow your training.

You know, usually, the ideal day at working the Boston Marathon is do nothing and sit there and watch people finish. I'll be there next year. Absolutely. I haven't changed my mind one cent bit. It will be different next year and unfortunately it will never be the same as it was but I'm 110 per cent behind this event and will be back there next year."

The video also appears here, with some additional quotes not on tape

http://blogs.desmoinesregister.com/d...nclick_check=1

Additional quotes:

One of the first victims he saw: "One guy had both his legs blown off. ... From his knees down there was nothing, just stumps. There was skin hanging."

He tried to comfort another woman, reassure her that she would be OK and receive medical attention soon.

"Her leg was blown wide open," he said. "Her bone was sticking out. Her heel bone was gone."

There was a boy.

"A little kid. His hair was singed. I rubbed his back and tried to comfort him and keep him from crying."

After the bomb blasts and the initial chaos, the scene along Boylston Street seemed comparatively, strangely quiet, Neustrom said. There would be the occasional shout to request a stretcher or other medical gear, but for the most part the victims were rushed out of the area without clamor.

"For as chaotic as it was it was extremely methodical," he said.

Dr. Kirk Neustrom (Register file photo)

After Neustrom and a friend were done with triage and released by security from their medical tent, they just walked through the city to clear their heads.
"We walked like a mile, down to the Faneuil Hall area, and neither one of us said much of anything."

So this guy is so specialised he has to come in from Iowa?

This is what he looked like at the finish line:

where were the "patients" transported directly to hospital by ambulance? Where were the ambulances?? Parked up.

His story is complete garbage.

Let's see what his other podiatrist mates have to say...

19 Aug 2013 , 13:42 PM

#183

felixfelix

Writer

Join Date: 21 Apr 2013

Posts: 493

Threads: 2

Thanked 1,117 Times in 426 Posts

Re: The Alleged Medical Witnesses

In the tent - Nurse Katie Powers

<http://www.bradenton.com/2013/04/18/...ed-wounds.html>

"When people started coming in covered with soot, that's when we knew it was bad," said Powers, who'd been on station since 8 a.m. "We made the immediate switch from a very sophisticated first-aid station capable of handling anything to becoming a trauma unit." What the registered nurse of 30-plus years saw was extreme.

A person with their legs blown off.

A person bleeding from their ears.

People with shrapnel wounds.

"I've never been in battle," said Powers, whose two sons served in Iraq and Afghanistan. "But there were what I assumed were shrapnel wounds in legs, feet and arms. Some people had head injuries, because they were blown back and knocked down by the explosions."

The tent was cleared except for doctors and nurses, who were instructed to stay.

"Everyone was calm, worked as a team, focused on our patients," Powers said. "Many of the physicians were ER doctors, but we also had cardiologists and family practice doctors as well." The nurses ranged from veterans of emergency rooms and VA outpatient clinics to mother/baby nurses like Powers, who cut off clothes, cleaned wounds and comforted the injured.

Read more here: <http://www.bradenton.com/2013/04/18/...#storylink=cpy> mother and baby nurse - useful in the tent, perhaps if a runner gives birth during the marathon.

Who was covered in soot??

Total garbage.

Andrew Powers can appreciate his mother's experience [/B} amidst the catastrophic change of events.

"It's a huge leap," said the Manatee County EMS paramedic/firefighter. "We train for traumatic events, but they were not expecting anything like that and responded well. I'm proud of her."

Powers tried to contact all her five children, who knew she was helping in the Boston Marathon medical tent as in years past.

"I didn't know what she was calling about. I thought it was a misdial," said son, Brendan, a former Marine. "Then I got a text from my sister: 'Mom's OK. It's like a war zone.' I'm like, what? Then I looked online and saw what had happened. But I knew Mom was OK."

Katie Powers and the rest of the medical team evacuated the tent almost two hours later when authorities suspected another bomb nearby.

Read more here: <http://www.bradenton.com/2013/04/18/...#storylink=cpy>

19 Aug 2013 , 13:50 PM

#184

felixfelix

Writer

Join Date: 21 Apr 2013

Posts: 493

Threads: 2

Thanked 1,117 Times in 426 Posts

Re: The Alleged Medical Witnesses

Quote:

Originally Posted by joanneatom

So even the CEO refers to him as 'a terrorist'.....

That's Kevin Tabb, of the Beth Israel Medical Centre, name lost in the boxed quote.

U.S.-born Tabb "emigrated to Israel at the age of 18 and served in the Israel Defense Forces.... According to the Beth Israel Deaconess website, the U.S.-born Tabb "emigrated to Israel at the age of 18 and served in the Israel Defense Forces." The site notes that Tabb completed his residency in internal medicine at the Hadassah Medical Center, and after 20 years in Israel, returned to the U.S. "Unfortunately, the way events unfolded was very similar to what we have become used to in Israel," Tabb told Israel Hayom over the weekend. "It is difficult, but you check you emotions at the door and treat any patient that arrives." Tabb praised the hospital's medical team for doing "an amazing job." He noted that the suspected bombers were given the same level of medical care as their victims. "One of the [Tsarnaev] brothers died shortly after his arrival; the other one arrived in serious condition and has since stabilized," Tabb said. "Whenever an injured party arrives at the emergency room, at the trauma section, the doctors and the nurses do what they are trained to do, and forget everything else."

Associate Professor Daniel S. Talmor, who is the director of trauma, anesthesia and critical care in the Anesthesia, Critical Care and Pain Medicine Department of at Beth Israel Deaconess, echoed Tabb's comments.

"There was a feeling of deja vu," Talmor told Israel Hayom. Talmor was born in Jerusalem and studied medicine at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, graduating in 1991. He arrived in Beth Israel Deaconess 12 years ago as part of a fellowship and chose to stay in the U.S.

"I can remember how, when I worked at the Soroka Medical Center [in Beersheba], we used to have injured soldiers lying next to terrorists," he said. "Luckily, [before the bombing] all the hospitals [in the Boston area] had already been reinforced because of the marathon, but rather than dealing with dehydration, they had to treat trauma patients. The past 36 hours were pretty frightening, with sirens howling all the time, and I could even hear shots being fired near my house. I am pretty sure that people around here are now going to understand Israel a little better now."

Page 19 of 19 « First < 9 14 15 16 17 18 19

Let's Roll Forums > The Last American Forum > Government, Media & Corporate Hoaxes > The Boston Marathon Bombing Hoax

« Previous Thread | Next Thread »

Currently Active Users Viewing This Thread: 1 (0 members and 1 guests)

Posting Rules

You may not post new threads
 You may not post replies
 You may not post attachments
 You may not edit your posts

BB code is On Smilies are On
[IMG] code is On
HTML code is Off

Forum Rules

Forum Jump

The Boston Marathon Bombing Hoax

Go

Sponsored links

All times are GMT -5. The time now is 13:02 PM.

```
-- Default Style (90%)
```

The Lets Roll Forums - Top

Powered by vBulletin® Version 3.8.6
Copyright ©2000 - 2013, Jelsoft Enterprises Ltd.
Ad Management by RedTyger